2013 Post Graduation Survey of Undergraduate Alumni

Published April 2014

University of St. Thomas

A survey of December 2012, May 2013 and July 2013 graduates of St. Thomas undergraduate programs one year after graduation compiled annually by the Career Development Center.
About this Survey

The Post Graduation Survey of Undergraduate Alumni is assembled annually by the Career Development Center in an effort to provide accurate and useful information to students, faculty, staff and administration about the post-graduation activities of undergraduate alumni from the University of St. Thomas. We hope this information will be used to advise current and future students.

The information in this report covers alumni who graduated from an undergraduate program during the 2012-2013 academic year (December 2012, May 2013 and July 2013). The survey was sent out to 1,290 alumni September 2013 through February 2014. Of these, 656 (50.85%) responded to the survey.

128 graduates responding to the survey completed coursework for two or more majors. Those graduates have been included under each of their academic majors. These circumstances account for the total of 794 responses when individual majors are reported.

This survey, as well as previous survey results may be found on the Career Development Center’s website at www.stthomas.edu/careerdevelopment/post-graduation-survey.

Understanding the Survey

Various options are available to students after graduation. Many seek Full-Time employment and some find Part-Time work as they attend graduate school, navigate career paths, or explore options. Others volunteer, enlist in the military, or attend graduate school full-time. Employment, graduate school, and salary rates will differ depending upon major and career field of choice. These numbers as a whole tell only part of the story about what St. Thomas graduates are doing. Breakdowns by colleges and departments are available on pages 4-5 and 8-9. Organizations where graduates found employment are available starting on page 10. Graduate school listings are found on page 32.

The best way to use this report is to examine information listed under individual colleges and departments you are interested in learning more about. By looking at each discipline separately you will be able to understand entry-level options, salaries, internship experience, and graduate school requirements unique to each career or vocational path.

Median salaries are reported by department instead of major to provide increased statistical significance. To protect confidentiality, departments with less than three salary responses cannot be reported alone, therefore we made the following modifications to the method for salary calculations: For Geography, we included last year's data in the calculations.

Employers with Two or More Graduates Reporting Employment

Organizations are listed by the name self-reported to us by the graduates. When possible we have attempted to use the business name, style, and punctuation preferred by the organization. Organizations with multiple business units or branches have been consolidated under a commonly recognized “household” name. These are noted with the term “combined” following the organization name and a listing of the reported units or branches below it. At times the exact business unit or branch may have been left vague by the graduate.

Methodology

This data is reported in summary and released to the general public in both printed and electronic form.

Participants are asked to fill out the online survey consisting of 15 questions or a paper version with the same employment and continuing education questions. Questions asked in the survey include: current employment status, sector of employment, organization of employment, title of position, approximate annual salary, graduate program enrollment and, if enrolled, field of study and location. Participants are also asked if and where they held an internship.

Beginning in September of the survey year, subjects are identified by their graduation date. Those graduating the previous academic year (December, May and July) will be surveyed. Our office makes initial contact through email to one or more email addresses on file for the graduate. Those who do not respond receive at least three email reminders, a post card, followed by a paper survey mailed in December.

As an incentive to filling out the survey we hold a drawing for a chance to win an Amazon.com gift certificate. The first drawing occurs in September for December graduates completing the survey early. A second drawing for one of five Amazon.com gift certificates (one valued at $100, one valued at $50, and three valued at $25) is held in March and is open to all valid participants including those who responded in September.

Responses to the survey are confidential, handled by professional university staff, and stored in electronic format on a university server with restricted access. This data will be kept in perpetuity so as to compare subsequent surveys. Survey data is always reported in aggregate form and individual survey responses are available only to limited staff within the Career Development Center and Institutional Research and Analysis for additional aggregate reporting. Individual responses with personal identifying information are never singled out, released, or distributed within the university.

Aggregate data (not individual responses) is reported to the Minnesota Private College Research Foundation. All member career centers provide this data for state-wide reporting.

During the process of mailing out surveys the Career Development Center receives address update information from the United States Postal Service. These are handed over to the Development Office in order to update university records. Additional updated address information may be handed over to Development with the participant’s consent. Survey responses are not given to the Development Office or any other university department. The Development Office is the university office responsible for keeping alumni contact information up to date.

Response Rate and Sample Size

In statistics, sampling methods are used to form an estimate of characteristics of the entire population. With the post graduation survey the Career Development Center attempts to contact the entire class through email and postal mail. Over the last several years the response rate has been between 45 and 51 percent, which is the national average for a survey conducted 6 to 8 months after graduation.

The Career Development Center makes the best possible effort to contact the entire recent alumni population. Sampling naturally occurs when graduates fail to respond to the survey or cannot be reached. This sampling has been determined by the Career Development Center to be unbiased. Response rates are not related to major, gender, ethnicity, or other factors which may lead to a skewed response as all populations are equally represented. Those not counted were either not reachable or chose not to respond.
The Career Development Center has found no evidence of employment status affecting the response rate or skewing the results. During the recent economic downturn the Career Development Center saw a fluctuation in salary and employment (a 5% dip followed by an equal rebound over a six year period) with no apparent correlation to the changes in the 45-51% response rate. In fact, in 2009 (one of the most dismal years) the Career Development Center achieved its highest response rate of 51%. The Career Development Center presumes that if employment and salary affected whether or not graduates returned the survey the response rate would have been lower in the years with low employment rates which was not the case.

Through email, mail, and online surveys everyone contacted had an equal chance to participate with the incentive to be drawn for a gift certificate.

Data Confidence

Results are monitored as they come in. Once the survey hits 200 respondents (typically a 16% response rate) the overall percentages do not fluctuate more than 5% either way. Added responses, however, increase the confidence level to support survey results applicable to the greater population of the class. It should also be noted that departmental response rates also typically follow the overall response rate showing that disciplines are equally represented.

For a population of 1,290 graduates (2013 survey population) a survey confidence level of 99% with a margin of error of +/-3.1% can be achieved with a sample size of 740 (57.36% response rate).

However, a confidence level of 95% is most used in political polls and other surveys.

To achieve a 95% confidence level the 2013 survey required 564 out of 1,290 responses (43.72%). The survey achieved this goal with 656 responses (50.85%).

With 95% confidence the survey reports that 94.81% of the 2012-2013 graduating class is situated (employed, enrolled in a graduate program, volunteer service, enlisted in the military, or not seeking employment) with a margin of error of +/-1.19%. The Career Development Center is equally confident that 65.54% are employed Full-Time (+/- 2.55%).

Contact Methods and Resulting Participation Rates

The table below shows the various methods, when they were executed, how many graduates received contact, and the response rate of each method. The right-most column gives the percentage by which a particular method contributed to the total response rate. For example, responses from email contributed to 83.08 percent of the overall responses.
