The 2014 First Destinations Survey compiled data on 70% of the 2014 graduating class.

93.88% of graduates reported employment, enrollment in a graduate program, volunteer service, or enlistment in the military.

65.6% of graduates reported full-time employment.

16.11% of graduates reported enrollment in a graduate program.

During their time at St. Thomas:

- 77% of the graduating class used our services
- 57% attended an individual appointment, seminar, or event sponsored by the Career Development Center.

Those who visited us 7 times or more showed high full-time employment rates, up to 91.7%

Employment is higher for those who used our services at least once (69.9% employed full-time) compared to those who never used our services (60.1% reporting full-time employment).

Full-time employment immediately following college is just one career path. Some students continue onto graduate school, which is required for career fields such as medical or law, others enlist in the military, and still others seek out volunteer opportunities.

The median salary range for graduates employed full-time was $40,001-$45,000.
